Complying With the Constitution Day Law

Institutions receiving Title IV Financial Aid, are required to hold a program pertaining to the United States Constitution for all students attending the institution. Higher education institutions must offer educational programs about the Constitution on Constitution Day (Sept. 17) in order to remain eligible for Title IV funding.

Homestead Schools encourages students to come to understand freedoms and struggles of our great nation. Examples of activities that Homestead Schools are conducting to meet the requirement are: classroom resources engaging students in the current events and civic education, readings of the Constitution, writing opinions about Constitutional issues, student debates on the Constitution; film showing, playing games that include questions about the constitution, viewing instructional videos about the Constitution, and visiting websites for National Constitution Centers.
